From the Connecticut Mirror.

Mr. EDITOR,

There is a good deal of amusement in the Hollowing little jeu d'esprit ; but there would be a great deal more to married men if the latter part of it were not so frequently true. It is selected from the first volume of a series of fugitive pieces called the Annual Anthology, and published in London, in 1799. The authors of the series were Dy-ER, SOUTHEY, C. LLOYD, Mrs. OPIE, COTTLE, and BEDDOES; but I do not know to which to attribute it.

" THE WELL OF ST. KEYNE."

(" I know not whether it be worth the reporting, that there is in Cornwall, near the Parish of St. Neot's, a Well, arched over with the robes of four kinds of trees, Willow, Oak, Elm, and Ash, dedicated to St. Keyne. The reported virtue of the water is this, that whether husband or wife come first to drink thereof, they get the mastery thereby.")

A Well there is in the west country, And a clearer one never was seen; There is not a wife in the west country, But has heard of the WELL OF ST. KEYNE.

An oak and and elm-tree stand beside, And behind does an ash-tree grow, And a wiflow from the bank above Droops to the water below.

A Traveller came to the Well of St. Keyne, Full pleasant it was to his eye, For from cock-crow he had been travelling, And there was not a cloud in the sky.

He drank of the water so cool and clear, For thirsty and hot was he; And he sat down upon the bank, Under the willow tree.

There came a man from the neighboring At the Well to fill his pail,

On the Well side he rested it, And bade the stranger hail.

Now art thou a batchelor, stranger ! quoth

" For an if thou hast a wife, " The happiest draught thou hast drank this

" That ever thou didst in thy life.

Or has your good woman, if one you have, " In Cornwall ever been, For an if she have, I'll venture my life,

" She has drank of the Well of St. Keyne. I have left a good woman who never was

The stranger made reply, "But that my draught should be better for

I pray you answer me why."

" St. Keyne," quoth the Countryman, 'mr-

" Drank of this Chrystal Well, And before the Angel call'd her away " She laid on the water a spell.

" If the husband of this gifted Well " Shall drink before his wife, " A happy man thenceforth is he, " For he shall be master for life.

" But if the wife should drink of it first, "Gon help the husband then !" The stranger stoopt to the Well of St. Keyne And drank of the waters again.

" You drank of the Well, I warrant, be-He to the Country man said;

But the Countryman smil'd as the stranger And sheepishly shook his head.

"I hasten'd as soon as the wedding was done " And left my wife in the porch; " But I'faith she had been much wiser than

" For she took a bottle to Church;"

I have attempted, but in vain Mr. Editor, to determine the period, when this good lady Mistress St. Keyne, flourished. There is no account of her, if I remmember right, in the Bible; and yet several ladies, there, stand on record, as having drank at her well. Sarah, Deborah, Mrs. Potiphar ob's wife, and Abigail were certainly there zebel. If we suppose a tradition from the remotest antiquity handed down, among the women, about St. Keyne and her wells, will it not happily account for the fact, that wemen in the days of Abraham and Jacob and long afterwards were so willing to go to wells to draw water?

From all the information which I can collect, I am led to conclude, that this venerable Saint has been very fond of visiting our earth, and that she has appeared in various ages and countries. For there is no civilized nation mentioned in history, in which there is not ample proof of her having instituted a well. She has, indeed, rarely if ever been seen among savages, for (luckily for them) they never dig wells .-Their wives are, of course, proverbial for their conjugal submission. Yet she is not very nice on this point, for Symes, in his embassy to Ava," mentions it as an immemo rial custom in that country, for the ladies, on a particular day of the year, to throw a pail of water on every man they meet-water drawn, unquestionably, from a well of St. Keyne.

I am not much acquainted with the domestic economy of other parts of New England; but certain I am from the past and present state of things in the district where I live, that madam St. Keyne was one of the first settlers of the colony. From a variety of scraps in our ancient history one is forced to believe; and believing, to regret; that the first work our ancestors undertook was, the digging her a well; for though family secrets of this kind are not apt to leak out, yet enough have oozed to indicate the pressure within.

That there is such a Well in my neighborhood, Mr. Editor, no man acquainted with the subject can honestly deny. It is but a few days since I heard one of my neighbors assert it as a positive fact that there was but one man in his street, (not meaning himself) who governed his wife; and NOT ONE in the street adjoining! As far as I can learn these two streets are fair representatives of the rest of the town.

Uncle Selby, in Sir Charles Grandison, complains, that women have too much Freemasonry. I never realized the truth of the complaint, till I considered that in spite of their natural propensity, the ladies in this part of the country have been able for a century and a half to keep the situation of their Well of St. Keyne so profound a secret .-That there is such a Well somewhere in the country round about is fully proved by that very just mode of arguing from effects to

" For there is not a wife in the whole country, " But has drank of a Well of St. Keyne."

I have heard frequent complaints of the wells in this town, and several gentlemen have seriously proposed to have it supplied with water by aqueducts.* But this plan would be ineffectual, unless we could induce the ladies to allow all the wells to be filled up; (a concession not to be hoped;) as I am fully persuaded, that if hut one well remained, it would prove a well of St. Keyne. In such a state of things, what man among us is not ready to exclaim with the old Roman Historian.

O saecula auri, homines e fontibus hauriebant O the golden days, before mankind dug wells? Uxoni NUPTUS.

*[We would just remind our respectable correspondent, and he may, if he chooses, repeat the information to the gentlemen of his town, that the plan of supplying water by aqueducts, will answer no purpose as it respects the present generation of ladies, for they doubtless have all, young and old, found the "Well of St. Keyne" in that town. A more certain mode will be found, in running away to the Westward, and at the end of three years, by the aid of our laws, their wives will be able to procure divorces.

[Editor.]

From the Baltimare Federal Republican. Upon no subject have false impressions been so universally entertained as that of the late negociation at Washington. Even federalists of rank and influence have for a time been led astray by the falsehoods and consummate ingenuity of democrats. We have heard some of these credulous gentlemen, who instead of reading and thinking for themselves, run away with the plausible misrepresentations of interested partizans, actually assert that Mr. Jackson was sent to this country without having any authority whatever to adjust the differences between the two governments. Ask these same gentlemen if they have read the correspondence: they answer truly, " no but before their husbands; not to mention Je- it, that Mr. Jackson had no rower: The message:

National Intelligencer says he was invested with no such power, and the same declaration is to be found in the l'resident's message to congress." Such is the sandy foundation upon which some persons from whom we had a right to expect better things have built their opinions. They will have the satisfaction to find themselves laughed at in the sleeve by the very fellows who have deceived them.

To disprove the assertion that Mr. Jack. son had no power to treat, it is sufficient to give a cursory perusal to the correspondence published. There is no other mode of ascertaining the fact, except by the declarations of the minister himself, unless the secretary of state, as in the case of Mr. Erskine, has also had the address to get a peep at Mr. Jackson's secret instruc-

We assert it as a fact that Mr. Jackson was invested by his sovereign with full power to adjust the existing differences between the two governments. To support the assertion it is only necessary to quote a few short paragraphs from the correspondence itself.

In secretary Smith's letter of the 9th of October may be found the following para-

1. That you have no instructions from your government which authorise you to make any explanations whatever to this government, as to the reasons which had induced his Britannic majesty to disavow the arrangement lately made by your predeces. sor, and that therefore you could not make any such explanations?

Mr. Smith introduces this paragraph by stating that the President had learned its contents with no less surprise than regret.

The British minister lost no time in answering Mr. Smith's letter which was done the day after its receipt, in the following words, as related to the arrangement disavowed.

"But it accords with the sentiments of his majesty towards this country to observe also, that he considered, that as some time must necessarily elapse between my appointment and my entrance on the duties of my ministry, it would be a more friendly mode of proceeding to state without delay, and through the channels I have already mentioned, the motives that compelled his majesty to disavow the agreement, than to leave the American government in uncertainty in these respects, till the unavoidably protracted period of my arrival in America. I say this in regard to the original notification of his majesty's determination and of the motives of it, which being already made, it could not be supposed in London that a repetition of them would be expected from me; and of course no such case has been foreseen in my instructions. But if, beyond this any incidental explanation or discussion should be wished for by this government, I CAME FULLY PREPARED TO ENTER INTO THEM. I even consider them to have taken place between us. I have certainly derived great satisfaction from the several hours which we have spent in conference upon these subjects, because they have enabled me to remove some misunderstandings, and to refute many misrepresentations, which you yourself informed me of in regard to the conduct of the British government."

This part of Mr. Jackson's letter of the 14th October, contains an explicit declaration that he came fully prepared to explain or discuss the motives which actuated his sovereign in disavowing Mr. Erskine's arrangement. As to that branch of it which relates to the Chesapeake, the British minister makes the following declaration in the same letter:

" I will, nevertheless, avail myself of that mode which he still permits, to repeat to you, that his mojesty has authorised me, notwithstanding the ungracious manner in which his former offer of satisfaction for the affair of the Chesapeake was received, to renew that which Mr. Erskine was instructed to make."

After the above official and full declaration as to the authority with which the minister was invested by his government, how can the adherents of government reconcile to truth and decency the following I am told by those who say they have read remarkable passage from the President's

INSTRUMENTS.

" From the first official disclosures of the new minister, it was found that he had received no authority to enter into explant. tions relative to either branch of the ar. rangement disavowed," &c. The Ches. peake was one branch, and the orders in council constituted the other.

But we need not rely upon the above ex. tracts alone, to show the extent and nature of the power with which Mr. Jackson was invested. As uncommon means, means disgraceful to the government of the con try, have been used to spread abroad the belief that Mr. Jackson had no powers, but was sent here merely for the purpose of insulting us, we will adduce additional and stronger evidence to expose the falsehood and folly of the assertion.

In Mr. Jackson's letter of the 23d Octo. ber, may be found the following remarka. ble passage:

" Beyond this point of explanation, which was supposed to have been attained, but which is now given by the present letter in the form understood to be most agreeable to the American government, my instructions are prospective; they look to substituting for notions of good understanding, erroneously entertained, practical stipulg. tions on which a real reconciliation of all differences may be substantially founded; and they authorise me not to renew proposals, which have already been declared here to be unacceptable; but to receive and eis. cuss any proposal made on the part of the U. States, AND EVENTUALLY TO CONCLUDE A CONVENTION BETWEEN THE TWO COUN-

And yet there are men who have the audacity to tell the people, that Copenhagen Jackson was sent here to add insult to injury—that he had no power to treat with us. And yet there are federalists weak enough to join in the cry that the British minister had no powers. If men will not have the industry and patience to read, inform themselves and reflect, it is not to be wondered at that they are imposed upon by democratic misrepresentations.

But in order to put to rest the question, as to the powers of the British minister, we will quote a paragraph from his letter of the 4th of November:

"It will not, I dare say, have escaped your recollection, that I informed you at a very early period of our communication, that in addition to the usual credential letter, his majesty had been pleased to invest me with A FULL POWER, under the great seal of his kingdom, FOR THE EXPRESS PURPOSE OF CONCLUDING A TREATY OR CONVENTION, I well remember your testifying your satisfaction at the circumstance; and I have only now to add, that I am ready, whenever it suits your convenience, to exchange my FULL POWER against that with which you shall be provided, for the progress of negotiation."

To give countenance to democratic falsehoods and impositions, it may be denied that the aforegoing extracts are genuine, but we only ask that the correspondence may be turned to (it cannot be read too often) and men of character and sense, will be lost in astonishment to account for the erroneous impressions which have been made, as to Mr. Jackson's powers. If the secretary of state had any cause to suspect the British minister of acting without authority, why did he not take him at his offer and exchange powers with him? He had an excellent opportunity of discovering the great secret and detecting the minister in a falsehood, if he had no power, but he would not venture to embrace it. this would not answer the [purposes the French party. An exchange powers would have deprised this of the great ground of complaint which was to inflame the people against England. So soon as it was discovered that Mr. Jackson had authority " To con-CLUDE A TREATY OR CONVENTION," our government determined to dismiss him .-They pretended that they were insulted by inadmissible implications, and that no farther intercourse could be held with Mr.

The truth is, and sooner or later the people will be convinced of it, that the minister was dismissed for which they affect to not. The very m explicitly commun state, that Mr. Jac substitute " practio a real reconciliation be substantially for conclude a conventio up their minds to [and die jiss him. we he hat the fac bited us out in take the liberty of for themselves. ERZSTEIN,

Respectfully represents :

THAT your patitioner is well informed that divers members of your honorable house have a fondness for and are friends to the honorable science of Duelling, of which your petitioner is a professor, begs leave to state; that if sufficiently encouraged by your honorable house and others, he intends to establish an Academy for teaching that noble art, at or near the Capitol where your honorable body meet for your deliberations.

That from a careful view of the apartments in the said Capitol, he thinks the Library Room well calculated, and he humbly hopes will be assigned to him for that purpose -The situation is convenient for giving lessons to the members of your honorable body, and in case of any difference between them will answer for the purpose of taking a shot or two as circumstances may require.

Your patitioner is well provided with arms of every description; surgeons; nurses; shrouds and coffins of various sizes and pri-

That, having had the honor of teaching the first men of the age this important accomplishment, in particular the emperors of Chi. na, Russia, France and Germany, Duke of York, Colonel Lenox, William Pitt, Mr. Tierney, George Canning and Lord Castlereagh, he humbly presumes, that he is well qualified for the important undertaking, and can produce testimonials of his transcendant abilities from all the aforesaid characters and sundry members of the united parliament too to enumerate.

Your petitioner has felt some anxiety on hearing that a bill was about to be brought in to prevent duelling, which he hopes and verily believes, on mature consideration, will not pass, as such a law would be disgraceful to the nation; and he feels himself justified in saying, that had the late dispute between Mr. Smith and Mr. Jackson bee n settled by a ducl, it would have been highly honorable to the United States, perfectly satisfactory to Great Britain; and would in all probability have prevented a long and bloody war.

Your petitioner has the writings of all the celebrated authors on duclling, and several of his own, which will be kept in the academy for the use of the members.

Among your petitioner's arms, are several three barrel'd rifle blunderbusses, that go of at half cook : portable small swords with joints and screws, which may be lengthened at pleasure from three inches to three yards.

As the object of your petitioner is of great nation beconcern, he humbly requests that his ... non may be taken into serious conside on, and that he may receive such assistence in the premises as to your honorable body may seem meet. And your petitioner as in duty bound will ever pray, &c.

FROM WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.

This is the first holy-day of the present session of the National Legislature. The members of the majority, however, are clmost too thoughtful and melancholy for scenes of gaiety and festivity. Never, not even when the dear child Embargo was going to its long home, and its more than " THIRTY-SIX FA-THERS" were going about the streets as 46, in the second it stood 53 to 52 and mourners, was so much solemnity of counte- | was therefore carried.

nance discoverable among them. This is a good omen. To their senses we always knew they must come at last. They are well nigh " whist" upon the subject of the documents They say they could not discover, upon near. ing them read, that the administration had justified itself for its treatment of Mr. Jackson, but hope they shall find it so upon a critical examination of them. We hear nothing from them in public, and little in private, " of sound and fury, signifying nothing." They seem to be awakened to a sense of the awful responsibility which the administration has taken upon itself. They do not yet assemble in GENERAL CAUCUSSES, but are continually caucussing in squads, as new recruits for the army are exercised. Even Ariel, you know, cannot be in more than one place at once, but he has satisfied me that there is nothing of importance yet agitated in these private cir-

Let us hope that the language and conduc of our National Councils will at length become so dignified as to render Satire useless. God grant that we may no longer have

" A factious, giddy, and divided Seaate" like that of Venice, but one which would not have disgraced our country in its better days. Alas, the hope is vain ! Can one gather grape of thorns, or fig of thistles?

Congress of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, December 11. Mr. Bacon, after making some observations respecting the patent office of the U. States, offered a resolution to appoint a committee to enquire whether any, and what alterations or amendments may be made in the act for the encouragement of useful arts. Adopted, and a committee of five appointed.

Mr. Morrow offered the petition of Lois Strong, widow of lieut. col. Joseph Strong, praying some relief on account of the services of her late husband. Referred to the committee of claims.

Mr. Morrow, from the committee on public lands, presented a bill for the relief of the refugees from Canada and Nova-Scotia. Read twice and referred to a committee of the whole house to-morrow. Mr. Montgomery offered a resolution for extending the provisions of the act of 28th of June , last, respecting persons forcibly driven from the Island of Cuba to other places beside the said Island of Cuba.

Mr. Whitman, from the committee appointed to wait on the President to request information respecting captures of American merchandize, reported that they had performed that service, and that the President would give the information required as soon as it could be obtained from the proper officers.

Mr. Bacon called up his resolutions laid on the table on Thursday. He spoke in favor of the resolutions. Mr. Livermore opposed them.

On motion of Mr. Gardinier they were referred to a committee of the whole house to-morrow.

Mr. Love offered a resolution for repealing the act of the second session of the tenth congress, respecting removing illegal settlers from the public lands. Laid on the

The house went into committee of the whole on the bill for extending the time for locating military land warrants, Mr. HELMS in the chair. The blanks were filled extending the time of locating to the year 1313. Reported to the house, concurred in, and the billed passed to a third reading to-morrow.

A message from the Senate informing that they had passed several resolutions respecting our relations with Great Britain, (see Mr. Gile's resolutions reported to the Senate, published in our paper last week.) On motion of Mr. Newton the resolutions were read twice and referred to a committee of the whole house on Wednesday.

Mr. Quincy offered a resolution for calling on the President for a copy of a letter headed Circular, and signed F. J. Jackson, purporting to be a letter to the British consuls in the United States. Mr. Dana moved to amend so as to include Mr. Canning's despatch to Mr. Erskine, containing Mr. Erskine's instructions.

On motion of Mr. Eppes the two members of the resolution were taken seperately -on Mr. Quincey's motion it was taken twice—on the first trial the vote was 55 to

Mr. Dana's motion was carried.

On the question, Shall the whole resoluion pass? there was a long debate, in which several members spoke. The question was then taken by year and nays and carried-Yeas 69 -Nays 46. A committee was appointed to wait on the President to present the resolution.

ROME, August 20.

The senator, Lucien Bonaparte, has resided in his elegant country seat called Rusinella, near Frescati, since the beginning of the month. It is built near the ruins of the ancient Tusculum. They have dug up out of a ditch there, a quantity of arms, of vases, a quantity of human bones, and the shaft of a statue, the head and arms of which have been found at a short distance therefrom. The shaft bears the name of a consul. The senator, Lucien, has been so charmed with the things found, that he gave 50 crowns to each workman. They have since dug up another which is that of a ma-

HE first number of this valuable Work is just come to hand and is ready for coffee house.

Fully aware of the impositions that have been practised upon the public by strangers soliciting subscriptions from distant places; the Editors invite their examination of a Work perhaps the most useful, entertaining as well as extensive in its kind that has ever been undertaken in any country. And they flatter themselves that the American will by no means shrink from a comparison with the London edition, the offered at six dollars per Vol. less.

This number may be considered as a fair specimen of the execution of the work, and will be left a short time for examination, before the 2d number is pat to press. After this the subscription will be raised to 32 25 each num ber; and but a few more copies printed than are sufficient to supply the subscribers, that the early patrons of this valuable Work may have a decided advantage-subsequent applications may therefore come too late.

It is also the intention of the Editors to annex to the last number a complete list of the names of the subscribers as the patrons and encouragers of useful knowledge, the arts and literature of the United States.

Subscriptions are received by the suscriber, and no where else in the district.
